PLACES PENALTY ON DELINQUENT LICENSE

The meeting of the City Council was held on Thursday evening of last week, instead of Monday evening, being an adjourned meeting of the session which was held on Christmas eve.

A communication from a resident of 907 Hanover street was received, complaining of a drain of rain waters from an adjoining lot. This was referred to the chief of police for investigation.

An ordinance placing a penalty on delinquent business licenses was read for the first time.

The light committee reported many lights being installed.

The Christmas tree committee reported the success of the out-door concert, and thanked all that took part. All attending the meeting of the Council approved of the affair and expressed a desire to continue this out-door celebration each year.

Several requests from the Pacific Gas and Electric Company for permission to make many needed changes in their system were received and referred to the light committee.

The park committee reported progress and on requests of the contracting company that is paving the upper section, an extension of thirty days on the work was granted.

Information concerning steam boiler installation in this city was asked for by letter. This matter was placed in Chief Kennedy's hands to seek further data.

After the bills for the month had been ordered paid, Mayor Smith spoke on the progress of our city in 1928, and on behalf of himself and the City Council wished all of Daly City "a happy and prosperous New Year."

GRACE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

It's the first Sunday of the new year—let us make it a record Sunday and start the year strong both in interest and in numbers. Let every member of the church and congregation who is in town, and all friends of the church, come in the spirit of earnest worship and devotion, join in the spirit of the day.

Sunday school at 10 a. m., with classes for all. The school has a record of thirty-one Sundays with attendance over 100 in 1928; and is adopting an even higher goal for 1929. Come and help. We especially solicit new members for the school—parents and young people as well as children. Junior Christian Endeavor at 11 a. m. Senior Endeavor at 7 p. m. Church service at 8 p. m., with preaching by the pastor. Very appropriately this opening service of the year will close with the observance of the Lord's supper.

The Pioneer Boys are on the job. They have recently shown their interest in a practical way—by coming to the basement and spending several hours of vacation time in sawing wood. Result, a big pile of fuel to make the rooms comfortable for the services. Fine for the boys!

The Christian Endeavor found joy and satisfaction in preparing a huge Christmas box containing everything for a Christmas dinner, gifts of clothing and toys, taking it to a needy family in San Francisco.

SOCIAL WHIST AT ST. MAXIMUS

It has been decided to discontinue the large whist parties that have been held during the past few years in the Daly City Auditorium, as also the annual parish festival. At the earnest request of many of the people of the parish a whist party of a purely social character will be held in the parish hall every Friday evening, to give the parishioners the opportunity to meet and become better acquainted with each other. The first of this series of evening whists will begin on next Friday evening, January 11, under the direction of Mrs. McDermott, of 636 Templeton avenue. All are invited to attend this social.

On next Sunday evening, the first Sunday of the month, there will be a meeting of the members of the Archconfraternity of Our Lady of Perpetual Help. One of the Redemptorist Fathers will be present to conduct the evening services.

SHOULD CUT OUT USING "CUT-OUT"

From and after January 1, 1929, no person shall drive a motor vehicle upon a public highway when such motor vehicle is equipped with a "muffler cut-out" capable of being operated by the driver or occupant thereof, and from and after said date it will be unlawful to use a "muffler cut-out" on any motor vehicle upon any public highway.

A straight exhaust pipe can be used but it must be constructed to prevent and excessive or unusual noise.

So, don't use your "cut-out" in Daly City, unless you wish to have the members of the police department on your trail.

NOTABLE GAIN MADE BY BANK OF ITALY

With the most impressive gains ever recorded in its history, the current statement of the Bank of Italy, showing resources in excess of $847,000,000, has been published throughout the United States this week.

Not only have resources increased $82,000,000 during the past year, but deposits have reached a new high mark, standing at $698,000,000 as compared with $654,000,000 at the time of the semi-annual report last December, a gain of $53,000,000.

The number of depositors has grown more than 160,000, the present figure being 1,456,954. This constitutes a new record in bank patronage in the United States, placing the Bank of Italy first among the financial institutions of the nation. James A. Bacigalupi, president, commented specifically upon this feature. "We are naturally gratified with the public's evidence of friendly feeling," he said, "and view this as imposing an obligation on us to justify the selection of our institution by so many people. It has always been the desire of the Bank of Italy to provide a character of service which would adequately meet every financial requirement of the people of California, and it is in consequence pleasing indeed to experience so great a patronage. We feel deeply appreciative, and shall endeavor to merit the confidence that has been reposed in our institution."

A notable gain has been made in the volume of letter of credit and acceptance business handled by the bank during the year, shown by the current item of $33,000,000, as against $4,800,000 a year ago. The investment in United States bonds, and other securities, has also materially increased, standing at $272,000,000 compared with $238,000,000 at the close of 1927. The statement reflects a highly liquid condition, with more than $370,000,000 represented in cash and securities.

Stockholders have received in regular dividends this past year $12,000,000, with two additional fifty cent dividends amounting to $2,000,000. They have also benefited by the distribution of 50,000 shares of stock in Bank of America, equivalent to an extra dividend of $10,000,000, bringing the total yield to $24,000,000, or an average of $12 per share.

ALERT TELEPHONE OPERATOR SAVES OAKLAND MAN'S LIFE

The notation, "ambulance called by telephone operator," on the register of an Oakland emergency hospital tells only part of the story of how Miss Marie Aceves, Oakland telephone operator, saved a man's life by quick thinking and action while on duty at her switchboard.

Antonia Cervante had been ill for a number of months at his home, 224 Brush street. A few days ago he suffered a heart attack and fell against a table in the living room of his home, knocking over the telephone. Miss Aceves answered the signal which appeared on her switchboard. When she heard groans in answer to her "Number, please," she sensed something wrong and called an ambulance. Cervante was taken to an emergency hospital.

When Food Sours

Lots of folks who think they have "indigestion" have only an acid condition which could be corrected in five or ten minutes. An effective anti-acid like Phillips Milk of Magnesia soon restores digestion to normal.

Phillips does away with all that sourness and gas right after meals. It prevents the distress so apt to occur two hours after eating. What a pleasant preparation to take! And how good it is for the system! Unlike a burning dose of soda—which is but temporary relief at best—Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

Next time a hearty meal, or too rich a diet has brought on the least discomfort, try—

I was so nervous that I never got a good night's rest, had pains in my side and my back was lame and ached all the time. I got so miserable and weak that I could scarcely do anything. But, after taking a few bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription I was in good physical condition, my aches and pains disappeared, my nerves quieted, and I was feeling so well one would think I never had a sick day."

Denver Mother Tells Story

Nature controls all the functions of our digestive organs except one. We have control over that, and it's the function that causes the most trouble.

See that your children form regular bowel habits, and at the first sign of bad breath, coated tongue, biliousness or constipation, give them a little California Fig Syrup. It regulates the bowels and stomach and gives these organs tone and strength so they continue to act as Nature intends them to. It helps build up and strengthen pale, listless, underweight children. Children love its rich, fruity taste and it's purely vegetable, so you can give it as often as your child's appetite lags or he seems feverish, cross or fretful.

Leading physicians have endorsed it for 50 years, and its overwhelming sales record of over four million bottles a year shows how mothers depend on it. A Western mother, Mrs. R. W. Stewart, 4112 Raritan St., Denver, Colorado, says: "Raymond was terribly pulled down by constipation. He got weak, fretful and cross, had no appetite or energy and food seemed to sour in his stomach. California Fig Syrup had him romping and playing again in just a few days, and soon he was back to normal weight, looking better than he had looked in months."

Protect your child from imitations of California Fig Syrup. The mark of the genuine is the word "California" on the carton.

Urged to Cut Ablutions

In a proclamation urging strictest economy in the use of water, the municipality of Barmen, Germany, has suggested that the citizens eliminate their habitual morning bath. The city is suffering from a chronic shortage of water which of late has become more accentuated every day on account of increased production in the Barmen silk industry. As a large part of the working population of Barmen depends on the silk industry, it is impossible to cut down its water supply, the city fathers assert.

Drink Water to Help Wash Out Kidney Poison

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Begin Taking Salts

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Charles Pierce, 73, former state senator, and prominent in the Masonic fraternity in California, died at Oakland. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Lena C. Pierce.

Treffle R. La Senay, executive secretary of the Fresno County Chamber of Commerce, was elected president of the Western Fairs association at the closing session of its annual convention. San Francisco was named the 1929 convention city.

Bert B. Meek, director of the State Department of Public Works, announces calls for bids on general and mechanical work on a cottage for female patients at the Mendocino State Hospital and for construction of a dormitory for blind boys at the California School for Deaf and Blind at Berkeley. The Mendocino bids are to be opened January 8 and those on the Berkeley school work on January 2.

Judge J. T. B. Werne rendered a decision for $7,810 recently in superior court in favor of Henry Eckel against the Springfield Tunnel and Development company. The action was for damages over the loss of a spring on the Eckel property, headwaters of Mormon creek, which was completely dried up through the driving of a tunnel by defendant on adjacent property.

Teaching of traffic safety would be made a part of the course of study in all public schools of the state under a bill that will be sponsored before the forthcoming session of the Legislature by the California State Automobile Association and the Automobile Club of Southern California. The bill provides for a compulsory course of safety instruction, primarily devoted to traffic hazards and conditions encountered by children. This move is being made by the two motoring organizations, whose membership totals over 200,000 automobile owners, to reduce the traffic toll among children.

Sam Ferugia, Reedley rancher, lost his appeal from a conviction of murder in the second degree. The State District Court of Appeal refused to heed Ferugia's plea that improper evidence had been admitted during the trial in Fresno last April. Ferugia was convicted of slaying William Pearson during a quarrel on the former's ranch.

Decision to hold a high school cadets military training camp next year, which admit cadets who are too young for the citizens' military training encampments, was reached at Sacramento by Adj. Gen. R. E. Mittelstadt in conference with commandants from seven California schools. Major Z. S. Leymel, Fresno assemblyman, represented the Fresno high school at the conference. Some 300 boys from cadet organizations at Fresno, Dinuba, Galt, Porterville, Sacramento and Oroville will be eligible for the 1929 camp, which will be held April 26 to May 4. If the experiment is a success, General Mittelstadt said that the cadet training program would be expanded to accommodate a greater number in the future. The minimum age for admission will be 15 years.

William John Cooper, retiring state superintendent of public instruction, denied a report originating in Bakersfield to the effect that he had announced his appointment as United States commissioner of education. Cooper said that he paid an official visit to Lawrence E. Chenowith, Bakersfield superintendent of city schools, and the supposed source of the dispatch, but that he gave Chenowith no information concerning the appointment. Recommended to President Coolidge by Senators Hiram W. Johnson and Samuel Shortridge for the federal post, he has been under consideration for two months, Cooper said, but he repeated that he had received no word of confirmation.

The gypsies came, they went, and they came back again. Driving expensive automobiles, a band of gypsies clad in plentiful clothing that once was gay with color, but is now dimmed by grime, swept into Upland, began a quick campaign for money raising, and drove away again, headed west. It wasn't long after the departure that Upland police phones began to ring and stories of swindle and fortune telling were related to police. C. S. Lehman and Lorraine Loch, members of the department hastened after the gypsy band, overtook them and turned them back to Upland. There, in presence of the police and the victims, the gypsies reached into their many folds of clothing and produced the money they had taken from Upland: Due to the number of wanderers in the band there was no place to house them all in jail so the gypsies were driven out of town again and warnings sent ahead to police to keep them under surveillance.

The old system of guarding railroad-highway intersections with a signal man is better than depending upon auto drivers' ability to see automatic signals, one would surmise from a report issued by the State Motor Vehicle Division showing the number of crossing accidents. The report shows that in thirty days twelve auto accidents occurred at California grade crossings where drivers were protected by wig wag signals. Two of these mishaps brought deaths. On the other hand, there was but one nonfatal accident during the same period for crossings guarded by flagmen.

Almost Perfect

Capt. Walter Holmer of the Northwestern 1928 football team established a perfect record for calling the toss at the start of each game, and almost established a perfect mark in place kicking at the points after touchdowns. He called the turn of the coin correctly each of the eight times, and it wasn't until the final game with Dartmouth that he missed a place kick. The Purple line failed to hold, and Andres, who played a stellar game at center for Dartmouth, broke through and blocked his attempt. He made all the rest, notching eight out of nine during the season.

ADMITS CLIMATE MADE HIS TEAM

Coach "Pop" Warner Believes in Tricky Plays.

When talking about his great Stanford football eleven which overwhelmed the Army, its veteran coach, Glen Warner, gives as much credit to the California climate as to the amazing assortment of trick plays which dazzled the thousands at the Yankee stadium, including the Cadets.

"Yes," said the kindly and contemplative "Pop," while in New York, "there are some big, strong boys out there. The material is good and it's well distributed among the leading schools. But except for Artman, the 232 pound tackle, and Fleischhacker, the 220 pound quarter back, we did not outweigh the Army much, if any. Those two men, incidentally, would be better football players, if they lost some of that weight.

"I do think, though, that the Far West has an advantage in maturity that is probably due to climatic conditions. I have an idea a boy of twenty from out there is as mature as a boy of twenty-one here is the East.

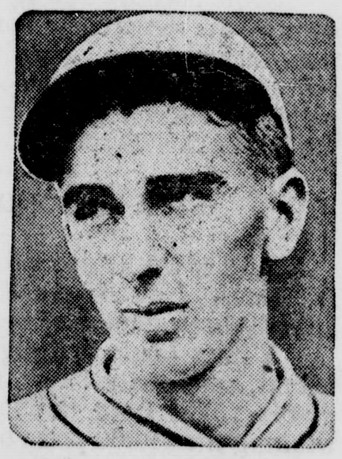
"Another thing is that while not all of our players are descended from men who settled in the West quite a few of them are and they have the same fighting adventurous spirit."

Even in the development of the open games, the vivid series of thrusts and jabs so well exemplified by the Stanford team, the climate of California has played a big part, Warner believes. Warner also thinks the East has been handicapped by rain and muddy fields.

"When I was coaching at Pittsburgh," he said, "I knew what it was to work up a lot of tricky plays with the ball sometimes going through three or four pairs of hands behind the line, only to strike a rainy day and a drenched field and not be able to use them at all. That probably has something to do with the fact that the East has remained somewhat conservative in its football and still is leaning pretty heavily on the old variety.

"Now the kind of offensive that I like, and a kind I have had a good opportunity to develop on the dry, fast fields of the Far West, is the sort that gains ground steadily and consistently by a series of varied and tricky thrusts. That type of play wears down your opponent and is pretty likely to have a demoralizing effect."

Hubbell Made Good



Hubbell, the Texas rookie pitcher, whom McGraw called to the trenches in midseason in 1928, pitched remarkable ball from his first to his last game. He took his regular turn in every crucial series when the pennant hung in the balance. McGraw took nine young pitchers to the training camp last spring, all promising and many costly ones in the lot, but not one earned a regular berth. At last, in desperation he called Hubbell from Beaumont and the youngster pitched phenomenal ball. It is confidently expected that he will be a star next year.

Notre Dame to Have New Stadium Seating 60,000

A stadium seating 60,000 is expected to be completed before Notre Dame's 1929 football season opens, Coach Knute K. Rockne announced at a chamber of commerce meeting at South Bend.

"It always has been my intention to bring the best teams that I could to South Bend," Rockne said. "If given a stadium, I will bring the best of the nation's elevens here."

Rockne said this year's Notre Dame eleven is one of the most courageous in the school's history.

Visitor's Ride Was in Nature of Trial Trip

Representative Virgil Chapman of Kentucky said at a dinner in Paris:

"We Kentuckians are daring horsemen. A friend of mine was invited to visit a famous stock farm and when he got off the train a groom was waiting for him with a pair of very restive horses. The horses reared and kicked, but the groom seemed to know his business and my friend climbed up into the high cart without anxiety.

"Whiz! Lickity-split! Off they went like the wind, and a hundred yards down the road the cart turned over in a ditch.

"'How long have these horses been in harness?' my friend asked the groom, as he climbed out of the ditch.

"'Half an hour, sah,' said the groom.

"'No, you misunderstand me,' said my friend. 'I mean how long since they were first put in harness?'

"'I jest done tole ye—half an hour, sah,' said the groom, 'and de boss he say if dey carries ye safe home he'll buy 'em.'"

"Phantom Ship" Uncanny

German scientists are taking great interest in the demonstration on Ammersee lake near Munich of an unmanned mystery boat. It is a motor launch, which, on receipt of a certain signal from the station, immediately returns to shore in a straight line. If the transmitter is mounted on another ship the boat can be towed by wireless and the distance between it and the towboat can be adjusted at will. A large doll of uncanny appearance fastened with its hands to the steering wheel caused the natives to nickname the craft the "Phantom Ship."

Soon you may be wearing clothes made of kendyr. This is the name of a fiber plant, discovered recently growing in large quantities in Asia, and found to produce textile yarn of high quality. A cloth made half of kendyr and half of cotton, tests show, is attractive and durable. Two tons of kendyr a day is to be turned into cloth by a new machine built for the purpose.—Popular Science Monthly.

[You can imagine Mrs. Robb's joy at PE-RU-NA'S wonderful relief.] "You don't have to have faith in PE-RU-NA—if you will take it, it will surely relieve." NEW YEAR'S DAY

The good old year 1928 has passed into history. The New Year was ushered in joyfully, with celebrations in the homes and upon the streets. And it is fitting that the arrival of the New Year should be joyfully celebrated.

Festivals in celebration of New Year's day may be traced as far back as 3000 B. C., when the Babylonians observed the day in honor of the sun god. Throughout the ages various days of the year have been considered New Year's day in various countries, England having observed March 25 as such until the year 1752.

The giving of presents or good luck tokens may be traced to ancient Rome, and still prevails in some countries. The Persians exchange eggs on that day. Many customs, pagan, Hebrew, Christian and social, have been associated with New Year's day. That of holding "watch parties," to see the old year out and the new year in, is observed by many church congregations and in many homes, while more hilarious proceedings take place in night clubs and other centers of conviviality.

By means of greeting cards, written messages or spoken word the salutation "Happy New Year" is almost universal. Thus we greet our friends and readers, one and all. May your fondest hopes and desires be fully realized.

The prize dumb-bell of the season hails from Pittsburgh. After losing a finger fooling with a buzz saw he lost a second one showing a friend how he lost the first one.

John Held, Jr., the artist, was knocked silly by the kick of a horse. But judging from his drawings we have suspected that he was that way all along.

PEACE AND CRUISERS

Many well-intentioned persons profess to see in the administration's proposal to ratify the Kellogg multilateral peace treaty on the one hand and the building of fifteen new cruisers on the other as a display of inconsistency on the part of the United States.

Leaving aside the rabid militarists and confirmed pacifists, the proposal is not inconsistent at all. America wants peace and is willing to join with any and all governments in a sincere effort to maintain it. But the experience of the past does not warrant the placing of too much dependence in treaties, which may be construed, as once happened, as mere scraps of paper.

In proposing to build additional cruisers, the United States is simply keeping her armaments up to a very reasonable standard, as these ships would serve for the most part merely as replacements for vessels shortly to be scrapped as obsolete.

Another thing which must be kept in mind is that when it comes to sitting around a council table for the purpose of urging disarmament, the nation with no armament has very little influence. What weight would be given to the voice of China, for example, in a naval disarmament conference?

It seems that wisdom should dictate the ratification of the peace treaty in good faith, while also providing reasonable preparedness for national defense.

RADIO NUISANCES

It must have been encouraging to radio fans to read a recent statement by Commissioner Lafount of the Federal Radio Commission in which he warned broadcasting stations that certain nuisances being perpetrated on the public must stop, under penalty of having their licenses denied or revoked.

Among the abuses against which he warned were deviations from assigned frequency and power, too much sales talk, broadcasting of phonograph records without announcing them as such, and inferior programs generally.

Further reduction in the number of stations on the air was declared probable by Mr. Lafount in a letter to Pacific coast broadcasters, in which he said:

"I told you six months ago that there were too many broadcasting stations in this country. I am still of that opinion, and sincerely believe that the character of reception the public wants, and should have, can not be secured until the number of broadcasting stations is greatly reduced. This can be accomplished by the denying or revoking of licenses, or the consolidation of stations."

If the Commission shall further carry out its program of reducing the number of stations, by getting off the air those which presist in the abuses of which the commissioner complains, the listening public will be duly grateful.

A USEFUL INVENTION

A comparatively inexpensive apparatus for generating steam for sterilizing purposes in homes, hotels, hospitals, dairy barns, or wherever a small and effective sterilizer is needed, has been invented by Prof. M. L. Nichols, agricultural engineer of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

The outfit is described as being simple in construction and operation, being designed for attachment to any water heater, either electric, gas, wood or coal. Facilities for sterilization in the home as a means toward cleanliness and disease prevention are coming to be considered necessary by progressive housewives, and the new invention will doubtless be welcomed by them.

Prof. Nichols developed the new device as an incident of his research in connection with rural electrification, in which the agricultural college and the Alabama Power Company have co-operated. He has presented the patent to the college, so that it may be made available to the public, a generous action which is most praiseworthy.

A SECOND LINDBERGH?

Add to the aviators roll of fame the name of Richard E. James. Not that he has done anything that had not already been done, but that he did it so early in life.

Young James is a high school boy of Flushing, Long Island, and is only 17 years old, but he recently completed a solo flight from the Pacific to the Atlantic, thereby winning the $1,000 prize offered by the American Society for the Promotion of Aviation to the first boy under 18 years of age to complete a solo trans-continental flight.

When one considers the hazards of traversing the Rocky mountains and other formidable terrain which stretches across the continent, the feat must be recognized as one to test the nerve and ability of a seasoned pilot.

JOKE ON SANTA CLAUS

From Paris, Kentucky, came a few days before Christmans a sad story to the effect that a little girl of that town, Tillie Oakley by name, was suffering from a severe nervous shock because some one had told her that there isn't any Santa Claus.

The story was circulated far and wide by the press and got immediate and startling results. Letters, telegrams and presents poured into Paris, assuring Tillie that Santa Claus is a reality, and urging her to cheer up.

Postal and telegraph people began to search for Tillie Oakley in order to deliver the messages and presents, but she could not be found. The Associated Press, which had accepted the press story, also got busy and sent a reporter to investigate, but without success, except to find that even if there wasn't any Santa Claus, there wasn't any Tillie Oakley either. The dispatch was a fake.

An encyclopedia says American has contributed nothing to architecture except the skycraper. How about the filling stations?

The Colma Volunteer Fire Department, under the chairmanship of Bert Silicani, entertained about fifty of their members, their families and friends, on New Year's eve at Jefferson Hall. The evening was spent in dancing, and at midnight a delicious Italian dinner was served. Horns, confetti and hats furnished by the firemen helped to make the party a great success.

GOOD PROSPECTS FOR THE COMING YEAR

William F. Whiting, Secretary of Commerce, in response to many requests, has made public the following statement on economic conditions and prospects for the coming year:

Some of the most important economic forces which dominate the business situation as we enter the New Year are credit conditions, the degree of accumulation of merchandise stocks and of speculation in them, the size of the crops and our current industrial output, the rate of wages and volume of unemployment, and the prospects of foreign trade.

With respect to credit conditions 1928 has been an exraordinary year. The outflow of gold which began in the autumn of 1927 continued during the first half of 1928 and caused a reversal in the easy money situation that had prevailed for several years. Public attention has been fixed on the rise in the rates of stock exchange 90-day loans from 4 1-4 per cent in January to 7 1-2 per cent in the early autumn and the even greater rise in call money rates. It is well, however, to note that bank credit for commercial purposes has been in ample supply at rates ranging from less than one-half per cent higher in southern and western cities to slightly over one per cent in New York City, while open market rates for commercial paper have increased by only 1 1-2 per cent during the year.

Agricultural output during the past year was about 5 per cent larger than in 1927, and there was an even greater expansion in manufacturing production, but neither stocks of raw materials nor of manufactured goods have shown any general tendency to accumulate. There is no considerable speculation in commodities and wholesale prices average about the same as a year ago.

Wages continue at a high level and unemployment has been reduced to a minimum. There has been a continued demand for additional workers by mercantile establishments, hotels, and the automotive industry and factories have once more been increasing the number of their payrolls. Labor conflicts in the coal and textile industries were settled during the past year and relations in most sections of the labor world are now amicable.

Activity in the automotive and construction industries has been sustained and is particularly noteworthy. Automobile production has been at a higher levels in recent months than at any earlier period and contracts for future construction have been substantially greater than in the corresponding period of a year ago. Production of many related products, such as iron and steel, cement, gasoline, and rubber tires, has been stimulated as a result of these developments. The textile and coal industries, however, still lag behind the others.

Foreign, as well as domestic, demand for the products of our farms and factories is steadily expanding. During the past year there has been an exceptionally large growth of our exports and finished manufactures—especially automobiles, machinery, and petroleum products.

In general it may be stated that both industry and trade are exceptionally active as we enter the New Year.

MAYBE THE DOCTOR WAS RIGHT

They were but recently married, and the anxious young wife called the doctor.

"Did you take his temperature?" the doctor asked over the telephone.

"Yes," replied the young wife, who did not know very much about such things, "and, doctor," she said, "it's 138."

"You don't want a doctor," replied the physician, "you better call the fire company."

Ethiopia has ratified the treaty renouncing war, thereby becoming eligible for a loan for military purposes.

This inventing business is going too far. An Austrian has devised a contraption whereby eight kettle drums can be played at once.

The House has passed a bill requiring a doctor to attend all sessions to render aid in emergencies. Some fierce gas attacks must be feared.

The RED LAMP

THE STORY

Events of the story as set forth in the journal of William A. Porter, professor of English literature:

The professor's uncle, Horace Porter, died mysteriously at his home, Twin Hollows, now the professor's property. Jane, the professor's wife, is a psychic. She insists Uncle Horace, dead for a year, had attended his class reunion and produces a snapshot to prove her contention. Professor Cameron, interested in psychical research, inclines to the idea of psychic photography. With their niece, Edith, the Porters go to Twin Hollows for their vacation despite Jane's reluctance. A letter Horace had been writing at the time of his death shows that he was interested in spiritualism. It hints of danger. A "red lamp" is mentioned. They take up their residence in the lodge, because of Jane's aversion to the house. Warren Halliday, in love with Edith, comes to live in the boathouse. A number of sheep are mysteriously killed in the vicinity. The slayer leaves a cabalistic sign at the scene of the killings. Greenough, a detective, arrives and Porter has a feeling that he is under suspicion. Twin Hollows is rented to an elderly, partially paralyzed man, Bethel, who, with his secretary Gordon, takes possession.

It is indicative of the whole situation, I think, that he lighted the flash. He was no longer lurking in the dark, waiting for the motor boat to drive the marauder ashore. That marauder, in the shape of a shivering professor of English literature, slightly unbalanced mentally, was before him.

Greenough was frankly puzzled. He had, one perceives, a problem on his hands. He wanted Carroway to come in and identify me, for without that identification he was helpless. And somewheres out on the water was Carroway, possibly with a stalled engine. He put his hands to his mouth and called:

"Hi! Bob!" he yelled. "Bob."

But there was no answer, except that Halliday came running out and asked what the trouble was. Greenough was thoroughly irritated; he lapsed into a sulky, watchful silence, and offered no objection when I shiveringly suggested that I go back to my bed. I left them both there, Halliday preparing to row out and locate the launch if possible, and came back to the Lodge.

This morning I learn that Carroway's boat was found by Greenough who had a fast launch with a search light, at one o'clock this morning, drifting out with the tide and about two miles from land. It was empty, and no sign of young Carroway was found. As it trailed no dory, our mystery has apparently become a tragedy.

And I am under suspicion. I have put that down, and sitting back have stared at it. It is true. And suppose what I am expecting at any moment takes place, and Greenough comes into the drive, to confront me with the damnable mass of evidence he has put together, the circle enclosing the triangle; the fact that the sheep-killing did not commence until after our arrival at the Lodge; the night Morrison, driving his truck-load of produce, saw me on the road; and most of all, with last night!

Suppose I tell him the actual fact? That my wife has some curious power, and that in obedience to it she last night aroused me from a virtuous sleep, to tell me she had clairvoyantly seen a man taking a boat from our float, and that I must immediately go down; that there was, she felt, something terribly wrong? Suppose I told him that, which is exactly the fact? And also that, once there, I found that Edith had left the canoe in the water, and that I had, like the careful individual I am, drawn it up out of harm's way? Will he believe that? I wonder—

Quite aside from my unwillingness to drag Jane into this, particularly as the possessor of a faculty which she herself only reluctantly reveals even to me, is my conviction that such a story, soberly told, would only increase Greenough's suspicion of my sanity.

And as if to add to the precariousness of the situation, Halliday himself in all innocence has added another damning factor; gave it, indeed, to the detective last night.

Yesterday, it appears, in repairing the float, he found a new and razor-sharp knife between the top of one of the barrels and the planks which made the flooring.

"I didn't tell you, Skipper," he says, "because I was afraid of alarming you. And, of course, there might have been some simple explanation. Starr might have dropped it, during his carpentering."

He was first amused and then infuriated by the web which seems to be closing around me.

"Of course they can't do anything," he says, "unless they catch you in the act."

But the unconscious humor of that statement set me laughing, and after a moment he saw it and grinned sheepishly. "You know what I mean," he said. "And in one way, if you can stand it, it's not a bad thing."

Pressed for an explanation, it appears that he had been thinking of going after the reward himself, and that this matter of Carroway has decided him.

"Reward or no reward," he said, quietly, "I've had a bit of training; they put me in the intelligence in Germany, during the occupation. And of course the way to catch a criminal is to keep him from knowing who's after him. Then again, if he learns the police are watching you—and he may—he's watching them, you know—it may make him a bit reckless. You never can tell."

But he has a third reason, although he has not mentioned it. He is chivalrously determined to protect me, and through me, Edith.

July 7.

Another day has gone by, and I am still at large. Free, I suppose in order that I may eventually again sally forth, some dark night, with my piece of chalk and another knife—for has not Greenough my original one?—to kill more sheep; if indeed there be any remaining for slaughter; or to stab and throw overboard another hapless boatman.

The plain truth is that I am sadly upset. Even what before seemed a plain and obvious duty, to go to the other house tonight and tell Mr. Bethel on his arrival the exact situation, has been all day a matter for most anxious thought. It had seemed quite simple before. I would say to him: "Sir, I have rented you this house. True, I warned your secretary of certain unpleasant qualities it is supposed to have, but I must also warn you. The building is reported to be haunted. I do not believe this, nor I daresay will you, but I feel that I must tell you."

Or again:

"There is also a popular—or unpopular—idea that some recent sheep-killings around the vicinity are somehow connected with this haunting. The police do not think so, but the more ignorant of the natives do. If this alarms you, I am prepared to pay back your money to you."

Not quite in this fashion but with a similar candor, I have been prepared to clarify my relations with my new tenant. But now what happens? Will Greenough, for instance, credit my entire disinterestedness? Will he not rather believe that I have given but one more evidence of my essential lunacy? Would I not myself, only a few weeks ago, have distrusted any individual who came to me with such a tale?

After all, I have told young Gordon. At least I have that to my comfort if anything happens . . .

I have seen Bethel, and I have not told him. He gives me every impression, in spite of his infirmity, of being able to look after himself, and after tonight's experience he is welcome to do so. Let him have his raps and his footsteps; let him find his tea-kettle on the floor, and his faces in the pantry. Let him freeze in cold airs or stew in his own juice. I have done my part.

His car drove in at eight-thirty, and I followed it along the drive. True to her agreement, Annie Cochran had only waited until seven and then had taken a firm departure, and I daresay this threw him into the execrable temper in which I found him. The secretary had assisted him into the house, and I found him in the library, with only one lamp going, huddled in a chair among a clutter of wraps, and introduced myself. He barely acknowledged it.

"Where the devil's the servant?" he barked at me. "I thought there was a woman, or somebody."

"There is a very good woman," I said, "but she goes home before dark. That is," I corrected myself, "she leaves early. I told your secretary that."

"Do you suppose she's left a fire? Gordon!" he called. "Go and see if there's a fire. I want some hot water."

He fumbled in a pocket and brought out what I fancy was a beef cube or some similar concoction, and sat with it in his hand.

"Which way does the house face?" he asked, suddenly.

"East. Toward the bay."

"Then I want a back room. Don't like the morning sun. Don't like anything in the morning," he added, and peered up at me through his spectacles.

Young Gordon returned then with a cup of hot water and a spoon, and Mr. Bethel favored me with little or no further attention. He has but one usable hand, and the secretary held the cup while he stirred the tablet in it. Only once did he favor me with direct speech during this proceeding. He glanced up as I stood—he had not asked me to sit down—and said:

I may have flushed slightly, but I doubt if he could see it, although his eyes were on me. "Yes," I admitted.

"Saw it in the papers," he said, and went back to his broth.

Then if ever was my time to plunge, but to save my life I could not do it. That truculent, childish old man, one leg stretched out before him in the relaxation of partial paralysis, one hand contracted in his lap with the tonic spasm of his condition, taking soup under the direction of a pasty-faced boy who grinned at me above his white head, was no recipient of such information as I had to give. And he allowed me no further opportunity; the cup empty, he indicated that he wished to go upstairs, and with a nod in my direction he shuffled out, Gordon supporting him on the infirm side.

I followed them to the foot of the stairs, and part way up, pausing for breath, he must have suspected my presence there for he turned and looked down.

"What do you think is behind this sheep-killing?" he said. Just that. Not good-night. Nothing whatever about the house; nothing about my presence or my approaching departure. "Who's killed them?" he rasped.

"Some maniac, probably."

"A maniac!" he barked, and steadying himself by Gordon, twisted around

so he could see me the better. "Religious tomfoolery, eh? The Blood of the Lamb!"

He cackled drily, staring down at me. Then he turned, without another word, and went on up and out of my sight.

July 8.

I am, I am convinced, under espionage. Old Thomas is too frequently in view, as he patters around his daylight tasks, and tonight I have a distinct impression that some observer who takes an interest in my movements is outside, watching my window. Jock believes this also. He is restless, moving from the passage into my room and back again, and twice, standing near me, the short ruff on the back of his neck has risen.

Halliday brought me today further details about Carroway's disappearance:

"The hotel clerk ran down to the piers," he says, "and he heard the engine going for some time. The boat didn't start up the beach, but out into the bay, as if Carroway felt the other man had a good start of him, and was trying to cross the bay. Then he either lost the sound of the engine, or it stopped.

"He waited on the slip for a half hour or so and then went back to the hotel. Greenough came in about that time and called up Starr, and they went together to the town slip. But Carroway hadn't shown up, and after a time Greenough decided to go out after him.

"They found the boat pretty well out in the bay—the tide was going out—and empty. They looked around, as well as they could, then Starr got into it and brought it back. But here's the part they're not telling: Peter Geiss says Greenough got some waste and wiped something off the top of the engine box."

"He didn't see what it was?"

"They wouldn't let him near the boat, but he says it was the circle again."

Of any other details there are apparently none. Bob Carroway has apparently gone the way of all flesh, poor lad. And while Greenough or some emissary of his watches me from my own drive, the murderer is perhaps concocting some further deviltry.

In the meantime a veritable panic has, according to Halliday, seized the countryside, and of this we have certain evidence ourselves. The road beyond the Lodge gates, usually a procession of twin lights, is tonight dark and silent. No motor boats with returning picnic parties rumble across the water, throwing us now and then a bit of song. The fishermen, starting out at three in the morning, are going armed and in fear of their lives. And each man suspects the other.

Jane's attitude these days is curious. She is quite convinced, for instance, that she had a premonition of Carroway's death the night she sent me to the slip. As she has no idea that this premonition of hers may be most unpleasant in its consequences to me, today I got her to talk about it.

"Just how did it come?"

"I don't know. I had been asleep, I think. Yes, I know I had. I wakened, anyhow, and I seemed to be looking at the slip. There was somebody there, kneeling."

"Kneeling? Saying his prayers, you mean?" with a recollection of the altar.

"I think he was feeling for something, under the float."

There is a certain circumstantial quality to this, one must admit. He had been seen and was being followed, and his knife for some reason was still where he had left it. Or rather, it was not there, since Halliday had that day found it and taken it away. Had it not been for that, poor Carroway might have met his end there on our slip, and not later. But the knife was gone, and there was nothing left but flight.

Just where that flight began no one can say. It seems incredible that he had left his boat moored directly below our boat-house, with Halliday so close at hand. It seems more likely that he ran up the beach a way, and that—well, de mortuis nil nisi bonum. Perhaps I am wrong, but it seems to me that Carroway could more easily have followed him by one of the row boats from our slip, than follow the method he did, with the loss of time involved.

Still, I myself would not have started out unarmed after a killer, even of sheep, unless I had first raised the alarm and was fairly sure of assistance to follow.

"But I don't see," I said to Jane, "why you felt that there was anything ominous in this dream of yours, or whatever it was."

"I never have them without a reason."

There may be one comfort to the superstitious in all this; not once, since the night when we lighted the red lamp in the pantry, has it—

Midnight: I have just had rather a curious experience, and I am still considerably shaken.

I had no more than written the above words when I glanced out the window, and distinctly saw a small red light through the window of the den in the main house.

My first thought, so certain was I that the lamp was carefully hidden in the attic, was of fire. Long before I had seen Mr. Bethel's light, in the room above it, go out, and soon after that young Gordon's had been likewise extinguished.

I went quickly to my window and leaned out. So dark is the night that it hangs outside like an opaque curtain, and as the light almost immediately disappeared, I was left staring into this void, when suddenly Jock on the staircase landing gave vent to an unearthly howl.

The next moment I heard, under the trees and toward the house the short dry cough of cardiac asthma, and smelled the queer unmistakable odor of Uncle Horace's herbal cigarette.

I have reasoned with myself for the last ten minutes or so. All the evidence is against me; Greenough may be watching me, or having me watched, and some poor devil out under the trees is suffering from the night air. Or old Mr. Bethel, unable to sleep, has somehow dragged himself out for a midnight airing under the trees.

But I saw the lamp. And it is locked in the attic. I myself put it there, and at this moment have the key.

July 9.

I made an excuse this morning to Annie Cochran, and she slipped me up the kitchen staircase of the other house and so to the attic. The lamp was as I had left it and the closet locked, and today I am asking myself whether, with that curious lack of perspective one finds at night, I did not see instead of the lamp far away, the lighted end of a cigar close at hand.

Annie's report on my tenants is satisfactory on the whole. She doesn't much care for the secretary, but the old man's "bark is worse than his bite." He comes down in the morning, or is helped down, to his breakfast, and she cuts his food for him—he seems to dislike the boy's doing it—reads the paper and then goes to work.

"To work?" I asked. "What sort of work?"

"He's writing a book."

But it appears that he is writing it only in the nonliteral sense. He is dictating a book. And it also appears he has chosen this place because of its isolation, and Annie's orders are that he receives no visitors.

But it also appears that young Gordon is perhaps not as courageous as he made out to me when he came to look over the house, and that he has been "hearing things."

"What sort of things?"

"He didn't say. But he asked me this morning if I'd been in the house last night. 'If you find me here at night, it'll be because I'm paralyzed and can't move,' I said, 'and if you take my advice, you'll not go round hunting if you hear anything.'"

"That must have cheered him considerably."

"I don't know about that. He just looked at me and said, 'What's the game, anyhow? I'll bet a dollar you're in on it.'"

Edith has sprung a surprise on us all. I have noticed for a day or two that she has been taking a keen interest in the mail; yet Edith's mail, with Halliday here, is largely a matter of delicate paper and the large square handwriting of the modern young woman, and has dealt this summer largely with reports on house parties, summer resorts, and various young men who seem recognizable to her under such cognomens as Chick, Bud and Curley.

This morning, however, her mail included a business-like envelope, and she flung the white, rose and mauve heap aside and pounced on it. A moment later she got up and coming around the table to me, gravely kissed that portion of my head which is gradually emerging, like a shore on an ebb tide, from my hair.

"As one literary artist to another," she said, "I salute you." And placed before me a check for twenty dollars.

She has written a feature article on our sheep-killing and has sold it.

"And it took me only two hours," she says triumphantly. After that she was rather silent, computing, I dare say, how much she can earn, giving four hours a day to it for six days a week. At the rate, then, of ten thousand a year!

"Considerably more than I receive, Edith," I said gravely, and I saw I had been right by the way she started.

She set off at once for the boat-house, but came back later considerably crestfallen, and poured out her troubles to me.

"If he had anything he would give it to me," she wailed. "If I can write and make money—"

"You can't fight the masculine instinct, my dear, to support its woman; not be kept by her. Besides, have you considered this? You will not always find subjects as salable as this one has been."

"Subjects!" she said scornfully. "Why, this place is full of them."

The result of which has been on my part all day an uneasy apprehension as to what she will choose next. Nor am I made easier by a question she asked me just before dinner.

"What became of the Riggs woman?" she asked. "Do you suppose she's still around here?"

"I imagine not. Why?"

"I just wondered," she said, and wandered to that particular corner of the veranda from which she has a distant but apparently satisfactory view of the boat-house.

Genius of Holbein Recognized by King

When Hans Holbein, the celebrated portrait painter, went to England, he became a favorite of King Henry VIII, who took him into his service, and paid him a salary of two hundred florins a year.

One day, it is said, a nobleman called upon Holbein when the latter was very busy, painting from life. Holbein sent a message asking to be excused the honor of the visit for that day. The nobleman, highly offended, walked straight upstairs and broke open the door of the studio. At this, Holbein also lost his temper, and aimed a blow at the intruder which sent him from the top of the stairs to the bottom. When his passion had cooled down, the artist realized his danger, and wisely went at once to the king, to whom he told the story of the quarrel. Shortly afterward, the nobleman made his appearance, clamoring for vengeance. Henry made Holbein apologize, but the angry peer declared that nothing but the offender's death would content him. Whereupon Henry replied, "You have not now to deal with Holbein, but with me. Whatever harm you do him shall rebound tenfold on your own head. Whenever I please, I can make seven lords out of seven plowmen, but of seven lords I could not make one Holbein."

Why Breathe Through Nose?

Reasons for breathing through the nose instead of the mouth are: (1) to warm the air; (2) to moisten the air; (3) to remove the dust and germs; (4) to produce more suction in the chest, which helps draw blood into the lungs as well as air, thus helping the heart, and more easily attaining second wind.

Watercress Good Food

The list of foods the doctor says you should eat has been augmented by a new one, watercress. This familiar garnish for meat and salad is a remarkably rich source of the vitamine necessary for growth and of the scurvy-preventing vitamine C., Dr. Katherine H. Coward and P. Eggleton, of the University of London, have found. It contains small quantities of vitamine D as well in its small green leaves. The green shows considerable seasonal variation, however, in its growth-promoting properties, the investigators have found, being more effective with laboratory animals in this respect in spring and summer than in winter.

It May Be Urgent

When your Children Cry for It

Castoria is a comfort when Baby is fretful. No sooner taken than the little one is at ease. If restless, a few drops soon bring contentment. No harm done. For Castoria is a baby remedy, meant for babies. Perfectly safe to give the youngest infant; you have the doctors' word for that! It is a vegetable product and you could use it every day. But it's in an emergency that Castoria means most. Some night when constipation must be relieved—or colic pains—or other suffering. Never be without it; some mothers keep an extra bottle, unopened, to make sure there will always be Castoria in the house. It is effective for older children, too; read the book that comes with it.

Drop in Temperature Explained by Culpri'

Little Walter Bowes, of Highland Park, takes life very seriously for a small chap and when anything goes wrong he manages to contrive some logical explanation therefor. One day recently he accompanied his mother when she went to call upon friends in Boyle Heights and while the customary gabfest was in progress Walter played on the porch, and while running back and forth, knocked down the thermometer.

This was a serious mishap but the little chap felt that it was his duty to report it and take his punishment, nevertheless, so he toddled into the house and stood at his mother's knee.

"What is it?" asked Mrs. Bowes, guessing from Walter's attitude that something was wrong.

"I was playing on the porch," said Walter, "and now the temperature is down."—Los Angeles Times.

OLD FOLKS SAY
DR. CALDWELL
WAS RIGHT

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice.

He treated constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a combination of senna and other mild herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

A bottle will last several months, and all can use it. It is pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. Elderly people find it ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

"THE HOMETOWNERS" NOW AT THE EMBASSY THEATRE

All of the five principal motion picture critics of San Francisco have proclaimed that "The Hometowners," now showing at the Embassy Theatre, is the furthest step yet taken by Vitaphone. For in this all talking comedy a George M. Cohan play is transferred to the screen without the loss of a single quality which it possessed on the stage.
"The Hometowners" is without doubt the most natural in dialogue of all the complete talking pictures which have yet been shown at the Embassy. And Warner Brothers outdid themselves in casting this production with nine celebrated stage actors in the principal roles.
Of interest particularly to San Franciscans is the appearance of Robert McWade in the principal role. He has been a mainstay of the Henry Duffy productions for the past season and scored unqualified successes in "New Brooms" at the Alcazar and "Daddies" at the President. Other parts are taken by Stanley Taylor, Vera Lewis, Robert Edeson, and John Miljan.

MILLIONS OF TROUT PLACED IN STREAMS

Millions of trout and salmon were liberated in the streams of California during the past two years; 51,444,562 trout and 26,728,590 salmon, to be exact, taking to the water in the state during that time, W. H. Shebley, head of the fish cultural department of the division of fish and game, advises the people in his report for the years 1927-1928.
Shebley's report, which requires 43 pages, covers completely the operation of this great department of the fish and game organization. He has carefully made a survey for this accounting of the operations of the twenty-five hatcheries and twelve egg-taking stations which are necessary to supply California streams with fish for the anglers of the state.
The trout planted during the two year period were divided as follows: Rainbow, 16,065,185; Loch Leven, 9,375,460; Steelhead, 9,610,085; Eastern brook, 5,535,340; German brown, 3,906,219; Large lake, 2,358,500; Cutthroat, 284,000; Black-spotted, 4,174,480; Golden trout, 821,000.
Accurate count is kept of the fish as they are taken from the troughs at the hatcheries and placed in special cars for shipment, either in one of the two special railroad fish cars, or in trucks kept at the hatcheries for that purpose.

EXCURSION FARES FOR HOOVER INAUGURATION

As Herbert Hoover is the first president of the United States to be elected from the Golden State, it is predicted that there will be an unprecedented attndance of Californians at the inaugural ceremonies to be held at the national capitol in Washington, D. C., on March 4, 1929.
In anticipation of this event and to enable as many Californians as possible to witness the inauguration, the Western Pacific Railroad Company will put into effect special low round trip excursion fares which will be published from all points in California and Nevada to Baltimore, Md., Philadelphia, Pa., New York and Washington, D. C.
Tickets will be good going on February 25, 26, and 27, 1929, and will bear a final return limit of March 27, 1929. Choice of routes may be obtained on either the going or return trips, and stop-overs will be allowed at any points within the final return limit of the ticket.

Next Sunday, Hoot Gibson in one of his best pictures, "'Clearing the Trail," and Carmel Myers in "Girl From Rio," will be the features of a splendid performance.
On Monday, January 7, Jacqueline Logan in "Stocks and Blondes" will provide excellent entertainment for State patrons. Theer will also be other attractions.
Tuesday, January 8, will be gift night, and on the screen will be a worth while picture, "Jazz Mad," in which Jean Hersholt and George Lewis are co-stars.
Next Wednesday, Conrad Nagel and Greta Garbo will be seen in "The Mysterious Lady." There will be other attractions.
On Thursday and Friday, January 10 and 11, that popular screen star, Richard Barthelmess will be seen in "Wheel of Chance." As an added attraction, the State will present the great comedian, Harry Langdon, in "The Soldier Man."

NEW YORK'S TELEPHONES

In New York City there is a greater concentration of telephone wire than in any other community in the world. About 8,000,000 miles of wire is required to serve the telephones in New York, this being 13 per cent of the wire mileage of the Bell system. Ninety-five per cent of this wire is underground cable.

It will not be long now until Senators may talk their heads off for all Mr. Dawes will care.

Another thing, in learning to drive a car don't try to turn a corner that isn't there.
